

News - Entertainment

LOCAL BIKE CLUB BENEFITS CHEROKEE HUMANE SOCIETY -

Chapter 80 of the Southern Cruisers Riding Club held a successful poker run on Saturday, March 19th, with the proceeds generously benefiting the Cherokee Humane Society. Riders started at Broken Spoke Western Wear in Gadsden's Southside, with two card stops along the way manned by Humane Society volunteers Freda Waters, Stacey Dunkem, Judy Sallis and Jim Sallis. The run ended up at the Biker's Shack 411 in Centre, where owners John and Pam Hunt hosted the Second Annual Crawfish Boil and Bike Show.

Pictured - Southern Cruisers Riding Club Officer George Holloway presents the proceeds of the Poker Run to Jo Ann Payne, Fundraising Chairman, Cherokee Humane Society.

The event drew a large crowd of both bikers and local citizens, and was attended by many vendors and out-of-state guests. The Cherokee Humane Society had a booth set up at the event, where they sold t-shirts, hats and other fundraising items.

Southern Cruisers Riding Club officer George Holloway presented the proceeds of the poker run to Cherokee Humane Society Fundraising Chairman Jo Ann Payne, which totaled $768.00. This donation will be used toward the Humane Society's building fund for the shelter which is now under construction in Centre.

Pictured below - John Hunt, Owner of Biker's Shack 411, discusses the finer points of how to eat a crawfish with Cherokee County Deputy Gene Knowles, who stopped by to check out the festivities.

