

AROUND THE NEXT CURVE

In today fast pace world of the 12Hour work days 6 days a week you have to make time for yourself. Brenda, Gizmo and myself, decided to take a few days off and head down the road to see what was around the curve.

What we found was a real nice little bike rally and show in Pelham, TN. where we met some really nice people. Let me tell you, you may not like their football team, but those Volunteers really know how to throw a party. They also put on a great bike show where yours truly just happened to bring home 1st place with an old Harley.

After we left the rally we decided to see how far we could go on the world longest yard sale. Now let me tell you if you have never been on the route that they have laid out for this event then mark your calendars for next year and you will find that treasure that you have always dreamed off. Believe me, what ever you can think of someone will have it for sale alone the side of the road

We went into Kentucky before we decided to turn around to head for home. As you will see in the pictures, Brenda got a new trike; Gizmo got herself a scooter. All I got was a rusty front wheel for a motorcycle. But we did have a lot of fun.

All good things much come to an end so we had to get back to the 12-hour days and making a living to pay for this fun.

See Ya on the Road
